

Pourth of July week is always dult. With the exception of family parties and jollifi-cations of a similar kind, where children may be both seen and heard, society makes no special note of the day. Then, too, it is always frightfully hot; and those who have lingered in town until this week are mightlly regretting the fact. The next few days will see a mighty exodus; and I venture to may that if you should chance to pass through the Midway about noon to-day, you would me scores of persons whom you know, emptying themselves from station wagons, traps and broughams, laden with golf bags, fishing rods, tennis rackets in their leather cases, and a general ready-to travel atmosphere as accompaniments, and see them hurry aboard the waiting midday trains to the East.

Summer resort seasons always formally open with the Fourth, and everywhere at Northern Lakes and Eastern coast, hotels and cottages will this week take on a live-ly air. No small number of St. Louis residenta, who went to Europe early in May, expecting to shop in Paris and get back to London for the coronation, with a return trip home by this time, are on the ocean and will go directly North to Harbor Point and some of the other places on Michigan

Miss Frances Allison has gone to Boston and the vicinity to spend several months with her friend, Miss Nevins who spent some time in St. Louis last winter. The two young ladies will visit several of the resorts with a party of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson Potter, bridegroom and bride, are down at Jamestown, at the summer cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Potter. They will remain there for some having changed their plans about go-

Some other recent departures for the summer are: Mrs. W. G. Hagar and her little daughters. Mary and Margaret, her son Mitchell of Bartmer avenue, have gone to their aummer cottage, "Dixie," on Luke Champlain in Northern New York near Pittsburg. They were accompanied by Miss Sue Bearden of Shelbyville, Tenn. and expect to remain until the last of Sep-tember. Mrs. James E. Dye and her daughters, the Misses Blanche, Rose and Violet Dye departed last week for the mountains of West Virginia, where they will spend two months.

Giencoe was the scene of a pretty wed-ding last Monday, when Miss Gertrude Fra-zier, sister of Mr. and Mrs. George Frazier, and Mr. Linus B. Carroll of St. Louis were married, the ceremony taking place very quietly, with only a few friends present. The bride's brother gave her away. She were an attractive summer costume of white mousseline and lace, with the customary tulle veil and a spray of orange blossoms. There was no reception, as plans have been made for a function of that kind when the bridal pair return from their Eastern trip.

Mo., July 1, 1902 - Dear Miss If complexion items are not Lamb: beneath your notice, will you give a word of advice to a most afflicted girl? It is all my own fault, too, for several peo-ple warned me when I first began to wear very high stocks that they would injure both the shape and color of my neck. I did not believe it, however, and am now in a most repentant mood, for my neck is so discolored and full of deep lines that a low-necked dress, or even a dress cut slightly low for summer wear, is almost out or the question. Is there anything that I can do? If so, please inform me. Yours, EMILY T. Yes, there are things that you can do.

Miss Emily, but it will take time and patience. The lines and the discolorations did not come in a hurry, if you will think a little, and they must be eradicated quite ns slowly as they formed. Alas! You are only one out of hundreds of girls who, when the style said high chokers, wore theirs as high as they could and as tight as they could. And now there are aggra-vating streaks of brown and red on the as they could. And now there are aggra-vating streaks of brown and red on the sides, with deep red marks under the ears and wrinkles—almost cuts, they are so deep over the entire western part of the city. -running from ear to ear under the chin. Sometimes it is not so much a high collar as the bad dye in collars that causes discolorations. If this happens to be your sad plight, try vaseline. One of my New Orleans friends fairly revels in vaseline for almost every known ill where the skin is concerned, and certainly in her case it works wonders. Take a soft cloth and rub on the vaseline as if it were soap, turning the cloth when it becomes soiled. Take a rest of five minutes after the vaseline bath, and then with a soft sponge and warm water wash off the grease unt'l every particle is removed. Be especially careful about this. Rinse in hot water several times and cool off gradually with colder water. Dry perfectly, and then rub the neck gently with some finely powdered oatwhich will leave a fine white powder on the neck and a marked improvement in the skin texture and coloring. A few treat-ments of this kind are usually enough for even the worst cases. This, you under-stand, applies only to discolorations. If your neck has become deeply wrinkled from winding a wide ribbon stock tight about the throat and high up under the ears, then patience alone can effect a cure. Get a good skin food, not the fancy preparations which are warranted to do everything under the sun in the way of beautifying, but some simple creamy preparation, or even sweet almond oil, alone, will Jo. Gentle massage with this night and morning, and regularly for several months, may take out, or at least partly remove, the deeper lines. I know one girl who has kept up this good work since Easter and her neck is greatly improved and the lines that were fiercely deep and long have faded into almost nothingness. But let me warn you don't try any severe methods, such as salt and lemon juice, as I heard one Cabanne miss rubbed in with a flesh brush the other day with the cheerful result that her neck is now so blistered and sore that she can't wear a collar of any kind, not even the softest ribbon, for three weeks. And don't use ammonia, either. You might as well

In Newport about seventy-five families of the cottage colony have clubbed together and are now having their provisions come direct from Fulton Market, ir New York, three times a week, at a great saving. Jamestown cottagers may have to do something of this sort finally if the islanders do not refrain from killing the goose that lays the golden egg. In connection with the Quononquot Club there is a bowling alley, a small and innocent affair as one can imagine. Some persons like to try their hams at bowling occasionally and it sometimes happens that they wish to do so it the evening. Last summer the very much respected family of elderly people, living in a cottage of rather close proximity made formal complaint to the town authorities that the bowling at high disturbed their sluthlers and that they wished to have the annoyance suppressed for this town authorities that the bowling for a time, but this year the club have gotten around the matter very nicely by using solid rubber balls and rubber bands around the ping, which had to be imported from Switzerland. This reduces the noise of bowling to a minimum and thus everybody is made happy. The club gave a formal opening and reception with free entrance, on the Fourth. MACKINAC ISLAND, MICH.

Special Correspondence of The Sunday Republic.

Mackinac, July 1, 1992.—Resort arrivals here are almost at a standstill owing to the unprecedented cold and rainy weather of the last two weeks. Last season, one of the most prosperous in the history of this resort opened in a very similar manner, but the rain this year discounts all previous records. The Grand opened Tuesday for luncheon and barely a score of guests have registered. A few cottages are occupied and the smaller hotels have some guests, but "society" is decidedly not here yet. Indications, however, point to a full season by the 19th or 15th, the advance engagements surpassing those of previous years. With even moderately good resort weather, the close of the month will easily redeem its beginning.

CROPS DESTROYED BY FLOODS.

Okaw River Bottom Country Is Under Water.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Vandalis, Iil., July 5.—The great flood of water which has poured in upon this section from the north has wrought almost incalculable damage to farmers in the Okaw River bottom in this county. North, east and south of this city for many miles hundreds of acres of corn are still covered with water from one to four feet deep, and thousands of bushels of wheat have been carried away by the current.

So great has been the volume of water north that every tributary of the Okaw River was converted into a miniature river, congesting the Okaw to proportions not witnessed here for years. Owing to the vast increase of acreage seeded to corn and other crops in the bottom this season, the loss will be great. It is estimated at fully $100,000, which will fall largely on renters.
